Notice to Mail Subscribers.

Subscribers are supplied with a notice of the date their subscription will expire ten days in advance of the time; and again with a second notice on the day the last copy paid for is sent. This will enable all persons to keep the run of their accounts, and to renew in time not to miss an issue of the paper.

One preacher in Boston refuses to preach on politics, insisting that he is engaged in more important business. He must have been reading the New Testament—a very antiquated book, written for other times. We learn from that—that there was once a body of people in the world, not at all popular, who talked and acted as if their chief interest was in a world to come. They did not concern themselves about civil institutions, and made no distinction between high and low places in society. The King and the subject, master and slave, were both alike to them. They were distinctions of day. If the slave did his duty, he would, in a brief period, stand on a level with his master, or higher up in the scale, in a happier world, where there was no oppressor or oppressed, no sin or sorrow. They really believed these things! and showed it by their actions. They didn't abhor a master to give up his slaves, nor the slaves to fight for freedom. They exhorted each to do his duty, and work for a crown of glory to come, despising all else but dross. All this was wise and rational, believing, as they did, that it was only for a season that these temporal arrangements should last. The soldier volunteers to be a slave for a season, to endure hardships, and sufferings, and dangers, expecting to return to reap the reward of his services in his happy home, regarding his slavery for a season as nothing. These very original and unpopular people acted on the same principle. They were traying to Canaan, and what did it signify which carried the heavier burden, so they all got safe at last!

This preacher of Boston must be thinking of these people, and trying to imitate them. If he believes and feels as they did, he will not preach about politics or slavery. He will not waste his time about these trifles, while may all pass away at sunset. Such notions, however, are unshakable and unpopular. Most good people profess to believe, as the first disciples did; but they are not willing to trust the belief too far. They evidently feel that there is some uncertainty about this better world. They hold a bird in the hand worth two in the bush; so they attend carefully to the comfortable distinctions in this world, and aspire to them. They will take the present good anyhow; make sure of it and run the chances for the rest, which they really hold at the bottom of their hearts to be rather uncertain anyhow. We shouldn't hear all this fuss about masters and about servants, and about offices and power, if men really believed what they hold theologically. We have read lately the resolutions of various bodies, proposing to belong to that body of despised disciples did; but they are not willing to trust the belief too far. They evidently feel that there is some uncertainty about this better world. They hold a bird in the hand worth two in the bush; so they attend carefully to the comfortable distinctions in this world, and aspire to them. They will take the present good anyhow; make sure of it and run the chances for the rest, which they really hold at the bottom of their hearts to be rather uncertain anyhow. We shouldn't hear all this fuss about masters and about servants, and about offices and power, if men really believed what they hold theologically.

In his congratulatory order, issued after the retreat to Chattanooga, Gen. Rosecrans said to his soldiers:

You hold in your hands the substantial fruits of a victory, and deserve, and will receive, the honors and plauds of a grateful nation, which asks nothing of even those who have been fighting in obedience to the Constitution and laws established for our own common benefit.

Reading this, so contradictory to the course of the Administration and the radicals, we may perhaps account for its summary dismissal.

Among the objects held out by those whose object is to change a war for the Union into a crusade for the abolition of slavery in the South has been that, in that section, labor, and consequently the laborer, was degraded. This has been used plentifully by those who wish to impress their own views upon the public, and for which they have no foundation whatever, other than their own imagination can furnish. Certain kinds of labor have been performed in the South by the blacks. We cannot see that it will be in any way elevated by placing the same labor in the hands of the whites. Indeed, there are some menial services which we can better done by the blacks than the whites, as we also hold that higher kind of labor more properly belongs to the whites.

If, however, the benefit to the laboring man is to arise from the schemes of these radicals, it is high time it should begin to show itself in some tangible form. It should appear in some way by which he can know at the end of the week that the cause has really promoted his interests. If one of these schemes could put this out, he might then be able to appeal with some effect to the laboring man to aid him in his schemes. Until this is done we present a few figures which seem to read quite the other way. Before this war commenced the consumer in every condition of life could purchase his necessities for domestic use at an average from 33 to 300 per cent less than at present. Thus:

A locomotive engine will carry 200 tons at a cost of fuel scarcely exceeding the cost of corn and hay which a pack mule consumes, and will move a load of three hundred weight an equal distance. The same difference of cost would be saved the community by using steam engines upon our city railroads instead of horses, which are now so numerous, that every car of coal is so much additional expense to employ more labor, and add to the general accumulation of wealth.

[Philadelphia Ledger.]

If so much is gained by the use of steam over animal power in hauling coal, is it not highly probable that, in the course of human improvement, steam may be found highly economical in the civilization of the country?

A correspondent is highly incensed at the cruel man or in which brutalities are often treated on our streets. We have often been tempted to commit a assault and battery upon wretchedness guilty of such conduct; but perhaps the best way is to refer the subject to the police. If there are any laws against cruelty to animals, there certainly should be arrests frequently until the evil complained of is removed.

Never Touch Statuary or Paintings.

Visitors should never touch statuary or paintings. By doing so, they almost invariably soil or deface them. It is for this reason that canes, parasols and umbrellas are taken from persons on entering galleries of fine art; and it is for the same reason that artists place upon their works, "Do not touch," "Hands off," and such like expressions. No person familiar with works of fine art, either in sculpture or painting, can afford to let his hands meet with his cane or umbrella; it is only the boorish, the ignorant or the reckless who are guilty of such indiscretions.

I once saw a person take out his knife and hammer and, having pointed it at me, said, "I am the son of Sheffield Birthstone to see whether it was meat." "Why, it is marble!" exclaimed he, and deliberately shut his knife, and put it in his pocket, much to my satisfaction; for the next assault, I apprehended, would be upon the spool as an explosive.

Are we prepared to follow this operation through an indefinite period? When a man has to work half his entire day to clothe a child, for which he must pay a single hour's wage, he is not sufficient, we may suppose, to meet now, compared with what it was formerly, on the score of dignity? We must feel that, and if we won't, we still must feel that, and the day will come when we will all know it.

LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY: SATURDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 31, 1863.

NUMBER 92.

A Card from Gen. John Cochrane—His Position in 1861.

To the Editor of the New York Times:

A few days since there came to my notice an editorial article in the World newspaper, relating to me something during the year 1861 the opinion expressed in the following reading:

"Readers.—That the rapid developments of the Southern Confederacy an historical fact; that, excepting by the free spontaneous act of a separate State, it is impossible for it, its independence of nationality can only be obtained by violence, and that we are opposed to every form of menace, restraint or coercion, under whatsoever pretext of enforcing law, collecting revenue, or retaking property, which may lead to a conflict with the seceded States."

This resolution was one of a series offered at a meeting of the Mozart Hall organization by John Hawks, Esq., on the evening of the 4th of April, 1861, and which were at that time referred to the general assembly of the Border States Convention, and though I did not write, I voted for the resolutions. Those of the seceded states immediately succeeded that above quoted are as follows:

"Resolved, That the time has come for patriotic citizens in the Northern States to get ready issues and arguments for the adoption of suitable amendments of the Constitution, for the reconstruction of the Republic, and that this organization will co-operate with those who aim at effecting these results."

It will be seen that the required steps should be promptly taken, and we anticipate the result of the Border States Convention, and that the Union will be restored to its former status.

Inquest No. 157—Held October 29th, 1863, near the first toll gate on the Preston-street plank-road, on the body of Lewis Mangum, aged 24 years, a member of company G, Eighteenth Kentucky volunteer infantry.

Verdict.—"Come to his death at the place above cited, at or about 6 o'clock p.m.,

October 29th, 1863, from a wound in and upon the right side, caused by a ball fired from the hands of Theodore Hunt."

JAS. C. GILL, C. J. C.

Mangum was killed under the following circumstances: He, in company with another soldier, went into the bar-room of Mr. Thos Hunt and demanded liquor. Mr. H. told him that he could not sell him any as it was a violation of orders. Mangum used some very abusive language to Mr. H., and struck him with a cane. Theodore had a carbine in his hand, and when Mangum struck his father he shot him. The ball entered the arm about three or four inches below the shoulder, then ranging upwards and inwards entered the body, there it lodged, causing death in a few minutes.

SUDDEN DEATH.—The Evansville Journal states that Charles D. Beatty, formerly engineer on the D. B. Campbell, was found dead in his berth on that boat Wednesday. He had been drinking the night before, and the coroner's jury who investigated the case, found that he came to his death by intemperance.
Beatty was a resident of this city, where his friends reside. The deceased was thirty-three or thirty-four years of age, and, we believe, unmarried.

BURNED TO DEATH.—Miss Mahoney, a young lady about sixteen years of age, living with the family of Mr. Morris, in Indianapolis, was burned to death on Monday evening last. She was standing before the fire, and stooping over to adjust the dress of a child, her clothes caught in the blaze, enveloping her in flames almost in a moment. She lived but a few hours, suffering the while the most intense agony.

THEATERS.—Owing to the disagreeable weather the attendance at both theaters last night was only moderate. At the Louisville theater Miss Sallie St. Clair closes her engagement, appearing in the "Wept of the Wisher" and the "French Spy." At Wood's the "World of Fashion" will be performed, Miss Jane Coombs sustaining the leading character.

Frank Hughes, formerly of the rebel army, returned to his home in Covington a few days ago. Upon his arrival there he was placed under arrest by the military authorities but upon being arraigned before them, he exhibited a pass from Gen. Rosecrans which showed that he had taken the oath whereupon he was released from custody.

Rev. William Johnson, of Ghent, Ky., will preach at the East Baptist church on Jefferson, between Preston and Jackson street, this evening at seven and a half o'clock.
He will also preach at the same place tomorrow (Sunday) morning, at eleven o'clock, and at seven and a half P.M.

THE WEATHER.—Yesterday was a most disagreeable day, it having rained steadily all day, and the streets were exceedingly muddy.
If this rain has extended above it will have the effect of raising the river and letting the oil out.

A series of robberies have lately occurred at a tavern on Market street, south side, above Preston. Thursday night five or six persons were robbed at this house of various sums, amounting in the aggregate to $200.

Sixty pontoon boats passed down the river from Cincinnati yesterday.

LOCAL NOTICES.

Hagan's Magnolia Balm.
This is the most delightful and extraordinary article ever discovered. It changes the skin, composed of five passenger cars and about three dozen box and platform cars, left Covington at half-past six o'clock Thursday morning, for Lexington, having on board about four hundred soldiers belonging to the First Ohio heavy artillery, in addition to the usual number of passengers. While the train was passing over a "hill," about one mile this side of Butler Station, and twenty-seven south of Covington, a rail broke, causing four of the box cars and one passenger car to run off the track, killing one soldier and wounding twenty-one others, besides a brakeman.
The following is a list of the casualties:

Killed—Enoch King, Co. L.
Wounded—Corporal William H. Smith, Co.
Lieutenant, Co. H.; William H. Foster, Fitter, Co. L.; Dr. Wm. H. Williams, Farmer, Co. I.; Geo. Wicks, Newell Reed, George W. Lyngrove, Co. K.; Henry Newman, Henry C. Marcs, Co. L.; Wm.
Tanner, Co. H.; George M. Moore, Co. L.; Geo.
Venter, Co. I.; John Reynolds, Stern, Co. L.; Thomas J. Davis, Co. H.; George G. Smith, Jefferson Hogglin, Co. L.; William Shrock, brakeman.

As soon as intelligence of the accident reached Covington a special train was sent to the scene of disaster. Upon the arrival of the train at the spot where the catastrophe occurred all the wounded were placed on board and taken to Covington. Eight or ten of them are very severely injured, and two or three will probably die.

A complete list of the killed, wounded and missing in the massacre at Baxter's Springs, Arkansas, is as follows: Killed, 83; wounded, 7; missing, 5; total, 95. As the missing men have not come in, it is more than probable they too are slain. The casualties were divided as follows: Company A, Fourteenth Kansas, 17 killed; company B, 5 missing; Company C, 6 killed; company G, 1 wounded; company H, 3 killed; company I, 22 killed, 4 wounded. Brigade band, 18; clerks, orderlies and teamsters, 11 killed; citizens, 3. Three officers killed.

silks or any other goods. Their value depends on their genuineness, on the maturity of the fur at the time the skins were caught, and on their shades of color. Ladies should not be imposed on by persons who offer them as 'real' furs, which are not of the quality required."
